Iris

MRS. J. F. EMIGHOLZ

3684 BOUDINOT AVENUE

CINCINNATI, OHIO

1927

We expect to move most of the Iris after the blooming period to a new location at Montgomery and Euclid Roads, Silverton, Ohio. Early orders are advisable, they will be sent promptly or when desired. We expect to occupy our new location the latter part of August, and will have improved facilities for growing and handling Iris.

READ BEFORE ORDERING

Terms. Cash with order, or before delivery. Remittances will be returned if the order can not be filled. Early ordering is advisable, as stock of many of the rarer varieties is limited. No order accepted for less than $1.00.

Delivery. Prices do not include delivery charges. Please add 4 cents per root for postage and insurance up to 10 roots. Above that amount they will be shipped by express, charges collect, unless otherwise specified. Excess postage remitted will be returned.

Size of Roots. Well grown single divisions are sent. These vary in size. Many white, yellow and pink toned varieties have small rhizomes. Those of Pallida or Ricardi parentage produce large roots. If large double crowned roots of any variety are wanted for immediate effect, they can be supplied at a 50 per cent increase of list prices for most varieties.

Culture. Sun and good drainage are essential to all Bearded Iris. Raise the bed a few inches to allow surplus water to run off. Have the soil pulverized and in good condition. Top dress annually with lime and bone meal, or acid phosphate may be used. The latter fertilizer seems to encourage the growth of fine fibrous roots. When planting thoroughly mix the fertilizer with the soil, place the tubers on the surface of the ground, spread out the roots, and make firm the earth around them. Cover with straw the following winter to prevent heaving from frost. After they are established, they need no covering in winter, except some of the tender Ricardi hybrids. These should be planted in extra well drained beds. Late in fall place a large box over them with panes of glass laid over the top and put straw around the roots. They can endure cold, but not excessive moisture in winter. Only varieties noted as tender need be treated in this way to insure success. Most of the large flowered Hort varieties are benefited by this treatment, as they are of Mesopotamica and Cypriana parentage.

Mixtures. 100 for $5.00. If wanted in quantities for mass planting, we can give special prices in named varieties during the summer months.

Seedlings. We are growing seedlings from hand pollinated seed of the finest varieties. Only one white variety has been named but a number are under observation, and have been sent to the New York Trial Gardens. Next year the best of these will be distributed. But we have a great many that are not sufficiently distinct to receive a name and these will be sold at $6.00 per 100 for those of medium height and $10.00 per 100 for the taller varieties, 50 or more at the 100 rate. The latter varieties are over 3 feet in height, with branching stem and large flowers. Some have lovely pastel shades and every one is different. We are looking forward to a season of pleasant surprises, as some seedlings blooming for the first time last spring showed a decided improvement in the white and pink tones, and in some bronzy shades. It will take another season of bloom to determine their fitness to be kept. There is nothing so thrilling as walking down a seedling row, studying each new blossom that has opened over night and hunting for finer flowers or new colorings.

Rating. In a Symposium for 1922, a jury of competent and experienced iris growers placed a rating on most of the iris in general commerce. It proved helpful in many ways, but was not quite complete on many points. For instance, an iris rated at 90 or over might have a very beautiful and large flower, with tall and branching stems, but it increases slowly, or is a shy bloomer, and its value is only for the exhibitor or fancier. Another variety is rated at 78, but a patch of it in the garden is a joy to behold.

There are iris for all purposes, and the average person wades through seas of description and tries to find the iris suitable for his or her purpose. An exhibition iris is not always suitable for color effects in the garden. We have a number that answer both requirements and you will find them so marked. So we have not given the A. I. S. ratings, which other catalogues will show, but one we have worked out in collaboration with Mrs. Silas B. Waters, who has a large collection, and is an acknowledged authority on iris. This rating is based on the good and bad points of the flower and plant as we know it, and represented by certain letters and numbers. We did not feel qualified to pass judgment on some varieties this year, until they have been studied more carefully. This is by no means a perfect rating, but we believe it will prove helpful to other lovers of the iris. We would appreciate very much any comments as to this method of judging, as it will prove helpful in future observation.

The following initials and numbers have been selected, and their meaning and application are as follows:

E means that the flower is of an exhibition type, and has some outstanding quality in color, form, substance, carriage, height and branching habit. A variety must have two or more of these qualities to receive this rating.

e represents slow growth. Many Ricardi and Caterina seedlings have this characteristic.

G denotes an iris particularly suited for mass grouping, and most desirable for color effect in the garden. This applies mainly to selfs, blue bi-colors, and some blended tones. Some of the most exquisite colors in iris are noticeable only upon close observation. We could not afford to be without them, as they are distinctive, but they do not make impressive color pictures in a mass. None of slow growth, however beautiful, receive this rating, as only a free bloomer is capable of producing a color picture in garden planting.

g represents a moderate to free growth.

The figures 1, 2 and 3 represent the carriage of the flower stem.

1 denotes an erect and often rigid stem, not noticeably or widely branched. This is found in Dominion and its seedlings, and most of the older iris of medium height. Many varieties of Pallida origin have this type of stem.

2 represents a straight stem that is branching. Many of these varieties are quite tall, and need a light staking in very windy and wet weather, as Ann Page, Asia, Mme. Schwartz, Prospero, San Gabriel and Mme. Durrand.

3 denotes flexuous stem. Some varieties are only slightly so and others more pronounced.

Every iris lover is invited to join the American Iris Society. It has done much to increase the knowledge and popularity of iris. The quarterly bulletins are very instructive, covering culture, history, value of varieties, etc., and in time form an invaluable reference library on iris. No one who is interested in this flower can afford to be without these bulletins. Every new member receives "Iris for the Beginner", and four other bulletins during the year. Annual dues are $3.00. Checks payable to Arthur H. Scott, Front and Market Streets, Chester, Pa.
